

To Whom It May Concern:

I have recently heard about the issue regarding K-LOVE and its sister stations. As a listener to these stations, I am concerned about the chance of it becoming taken off the air. As you may know, there are few stations to listen to as a family, and even fewer to listen to when you aren't feeling at the top of your game. In this sense, one is forced to turn to songs of hate, regret, and a plethora of other topics on secular radio.

Due to the positive messages on Air1 100.9 and K-Love 91.9 (San Jose, CA), people can turn to a radio station that lifts them up and lets them know that there is hope out there for them. If you were to take these stations down, then to where can people turn in the media?
